Access Group Extends Deadline to July 15 for Law School Scholarship Submissions

Wilmington, DE: Access Group has extended the deadline for entries to its One Less Worry law school scholarship contest to July 15, 2008. According to the organization, this provides students with additional time after the busy exam period to work on contest submissions.

The company's One Less Worry contest requires students to get creative and submit an original video of up to 4 minutes showing what they worry about as law students. Those who submit videos have a chance to win a $10,000 law school scholarship to help them with their studies.

"Access Group has always looked for ways to educate and connect with students," says Jeff Hanson, director of borrower education services for Access Group. "With this contest, we're hoping to learn more about the concerns of law students so we can better focus our efforts and educational offerings to meet their needs," continues Hanson.

Submissions will be reviewed by Access Group and ten finalists will be selected. The finalists will be voted on by friends, family and the general public with the scholarship being awarded to the entry receiving the most votes.

Videos may be submitted through July 15, 2008. Finalists will be selected from all eligible entries received and voting will begin on August 1, and concludes on August 22, 2008. The winner of the $10,000 law school scholarship will be announced on September 1, 2008.

The contest is open to legal US residents 18 years of age or older who are law students (enrolled or matriculated as of August 1, 2008) and candidates for law degrees (JD or LLM) at tax exempt law schools in the United States (including the 50 states, District of Columbia and Puerto Rico).
